Scotland has a rich and exciting church history. Take time to visit the sites relating to the covenanters (the fenced square at the east end of the Grassmarket where they were martyred, or their huge gravestone in Greyfriars churchyard, the church where the national covenant was signed in 1639); St Giles Cathedral where John Knox preached (and try and find the plaque on the pillar noting the place from which Jenny Geddes threw her chair at the bishop's head...); the little Magdalene Chapel in the Cowgate; or visit the Church of St Andrew on George Street, where a third of the Church of Scotland ministers walked out of the General Assembly to form the Free Church in 1843 (the 'Disruption' of the Church) - once you start to dig a little you will be astonished at the variety and depth of the history here.

It's not all history though. There is a diverse and vibrant Christian life in our capital today - perhaps you can take time to go along to a church service and see what it's all about - a selection of churches is listed here to help you. Some churches run programmes during the Edinburgh Festival, look out for the mask logo in the guide.

God bless,

Welcome to Edinburgh

Most Christian churches in Scotland's capital offer services in English only, but some of the Church of Scotland and Free Church of Scotland churches also hold services in Gaelic. The Free Church services are very solemn and traditional, usually singing only the Psalms without instrumental accompaniment. Local Baptist and Anglican churches are also well represented, and there are many independent churches in the city. Visit our website for a fuller listing at www.eventsguide.org. Foreign-language churches are listed in this guide if you would like to find a church with services in your own language.
